

It is my firm opinion that the FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen the effect of Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections. The law is working adequately for the state and its citizens. It is also my opinion that this is an area reserved to the states by the U.S. Constitution since there were no laws covering the issue before now. I no longer am pestered by calls at most inconvenient times of the day and night, including at bedtime. Should the FCC, in its erroneous wisdom, decide to go ahead with such regulatory control then it also should provide for a procedure to have unwanted calls forwarded to either the FCC offices or the White House so those bureaucrats will have to suffer. Such forwarding costs should be paid by the federal government.
